While walking through one of our district schools earlier this year, I noticed their theme focused on being “Bucket Fillers.” This theme is founded on concepts in the book, “How Full is Your Bucket,” by Tom Rath and Donald O. Clifton.

Their “Theory of the Dipper and the Bucket” is this:

♦ “Each of us has an invisible bucket. It is constantly emptied or filled, depending on what others say or do to us. When our bucket is full, we feel great. When it’s empty, we feel awful.

♦ “Each of us also has an invisible dipper. When we use that dipper to fill other people’s buckets – by saying or doing things that increase their positive emotions – we also fill our own bucket. But when we use that dipper to dip from other’s buckets – by saying or doing things that decrease their positive emotions – we diminish ourselves.

♦ “Like the cup that runneth over, a full bucket gives us a positive outlook and renewed energy. Every drop in that bucket makes us stronger and more optimistic.

♦ “But an empty bucket poisons our outlook, saps our energy, and undermines our will. That’s why every time someone dips from our bucket, it hurts us.

♦ “So we face a choice every moment of every day: We can fill one another’s buckets, or we can dip from them. It’s an important choice – one that profoundly influences our relationships, productivity, health, and happiness.”

Dennis Snow teaches similar concepts in his chapter titled “Everyone Has a Customer.” He says:

♦ “It’s important for every employee in the company to treat each other the way they’re expected to treat customers.”

♦ “I can always tell when an organization’s employees genuinely care for each other. There’s a feeling of warmth, energy, and fun.”

One of the greatest blessings of working in education is the opportunity to associate with so many good people who are “bucket fillers.” I feel it in your offices, your kitchens, your classrooms, and hallways. It is my hope that we can all “BE THE MAGIC” for our coworkers by focusing on filling their buckets.

Five Strategies on Filling Buckets

1. Prevent Bucket Dipping:
   - Simply ask if you are adding or dipping, then try to catch yourself in the act of bucket dipping – then stop it.

2. Shine a Light on What is Right:
   - Begin to draw attention to things others do well and what you like about them.

3. Make Best Friends:
   - Become the person known for noticing when others do a great job. You might start to notice that more and more people want to be around you.

4. Give Unexpectedly:
   - The vast majority of people prefer gifts that are unexpected…and the gift doesn’t have to be anything big or even tangible.

5. Reverse the Golden Rule:
   - Do unto others as they would have you do unto them.
Nebo Employee’s True Testimonials:

Testimony 1: “One Nebo employee was very upset and even angry that she had to have the health screening or have money deducted from her paycheck. She waited until the very last day to go to the doctor without being penalized. While there, she was sent for a biopsy of two areas of concern. The results were a malignant growth. Medical personnel are extremely positive and optimistic that the growth was caught barely early enough to avoid chemo and radiation if the entire malignant tumor can be removed surgically. Surgery is currently scheduled. The outcome would be much different had she not gone to the doctor. Waiting any longer would be disastrous.”

Testimony 2: “I felt great; but when I went in to the doctor, she asked if I had anything else bothering me. I said, ‘My skin is weird...’ Luckily we caught skin cancer before it was very bad.”

Testimony 3: “In the past, I have been a reluctant participant in Nebo School Districts’ required health screening. This past August, I attended the Benefits Fair and did the health screening there. A friend of mine who works in the health professions was there and looked at my numbers, asked me a few questions about my family history, and became very concerned. His concern coupled with my own family’s concerns led me to get the medical health check up with my doctor. During that check up, he decided to do an EKG on me. The readings were such that he referred me for a stress test immediately. The stress test showed problems. I was encouraged to have surgery the next day. A few days later, my health was addressed by surgically installing a heart stent which opened up three blockages. Had I not had the health screening, there is a high likelihood of my having a major heart attack which I would not have survived.”

Testimony 4: “It was a perfect afternoon as my wife and I headed south on I-15 for a long anticipated Presidents’ Day break enjoying warm weather and the red rocks. Just after Nephi, I received a call that was routed to my car speakers. (I was quite proud of the fact that I had set up the blue tooth connection myself!) The gastroenterologist called to inform me that one of the polyps he had removed during my routine colonoscopy was cancerous. I had colon cancer. After expressing his sympathy and giving me instructions concerning the treatment of my cancer, he wished me good luck and he hung up. (Now which button was I supposed to push to end the call?) “We were at first stunned. Then I went into denial, then a touch of sadness, anger, and then, both my wife and I felt gratitude. The cancer was diagnosed in its early stages. The prognosis is good. Up until now, I had been ambivalent at the requirements of the Wellness Program (especially the colonoscopy that my Dr. recommended!) Now, I know that it was one of the most important steps I have ever taken. Thank you!”
